

COVID-19 Hitting your cash-flow

We appreciate you might be worried about the impact of Coronavirus on you or your business, and want to remind you that we are here to help.

Our offices remain open, and for now it is business as usual. This is a rapidly changing environment and we will update you if anything changes. However the situation develops we will ensure we are available to support our clients in every way possible.

The impact of the virus will have a negative impact on the cash generation for many businesses, regardless of the sector in which they operate, or the geography of their trading.

In such difficult times we have a specialist team of advisors who can guide you through the issues and provide a range of advice and support.

This might include advising you on your legal responsibilities, and outlining strategies to navigate the issues your business is facing.

We also work closely with a large range of bankers and other funders, and our relationships in this area can help develop solutions, and even strengthen the business model for future, happier, times.
